

The Department of Environmental Health, in the college of Environmental Science and Engineering, is devoted to tackling environmental impact on public health. There are currently seven faculty members and two scientists. The research area spans from environmental exposome to environmental epidemiology, with a strong focus on exposure and health effects of outdoor and indoor air pollution.

There are several tenure-track faculty openings now. We invite application in the broad area of environmental health. We are especially interested in candidates that will expand and complement existing strengths, for example those have strong records on toxicology, epigenetics, metabolomics, and biostatistics.

We would really appreciate if you can forward this email to anyone who might be qualified. If the candidate is interested, we suggest him or her contact Prof. Jicheng Gong (jicheng.gong@pku.edu.cn) within 1 weeks. Only a CV is needed for the current stage.