

2021 Summer ACE Award “Honorable Mention”

Ali Armstrong
Assistant Director of Finance
Center for Health Decision Sciences

Ali Armstrong is recognized for an ACE Award Honorable Mention and here is a summary as to why:

Faculty, researchers, and leadership call her a “master of details” with consistently excellent performance and a warm virtual presence. Several directly attribute their own personal success due to her efforts with comments such as “I simply count my blessings every day that Ali still holds the role before she is inevitably promoted” and “in my research scientist role, she has literally changed my life” to “I honestly believe I would not have been promoted without her [financial projections and summaries].” She is lauded for her ability to break down processes into easily understandable bites, excellent communication skills, her independent and proactive manner at finding potential issues and providing solutions and being the embodiment of a true team player -- especially so during the pandemic. Ali is noted for being a model of financial administrators and PIs working together with one nominator expressing, “because of her exceptional administration, I can confidently focus on the science.” Congratulations, Ali!
