Saving neonatal lives

Günther Fink, a health economist with expertise in child health and development, thinks that all countries should aim to reduce neonatal mortality by 70% by the year 2030. He argues that this should be part of the new UN Sustainable Development Goals, which will be set later this year.

Healthy diet associated with lower risk of type 2 diabetes in minority women

Consuming a healthy diet was associated with reduced risk for type 2 diabetes among women in all racial and ethnic groups but conferred an even greater benefit for Asian, Hispanic, and black women.
